Dress Code

Does your company have a dress code? It's something to consider because your rcustomers are a great source of referrals. You need to do as much as you can to impress them with your professionalism. Imagine you are the customer. You called for a house wash. The guy shows up in a dirty truck with ripped blue jeans. He does a good job, but he just doesn't look right. Gee, Mom needed her house washed to, but I can't send this guy over to my mother. Or try this. The guy shows up, the side of his truck catches the sun and you need to shade your eyes. He has a blue shirt on with a cool company logo. On the other side is his name. He looks professional. The neighbor sees him and signs him up for next week. You actually call mom up to come met this guy. So, which one are you? If you have the ripped jeans think about a professional attire upgrade. These days you need all the jobs you can get.

Hi - Low Nozzles

High low nozzles offer a push pull feature.

When the nozzle is pushed forward it sprays at low-pressure and chemical will flow into the water stream from your injector. When the nozzle is pulled back it goes to high-pressure and chemical flow stops.

Most high low nozzles also have a variable fan feature. Twisting of the outer housing-will change the degree of fan. Look at them on page 7 of the 2010 catalog
